This is Sofia

and she is one excited princess!

This will be Sofia's first Wassailia holiday in the castle, and she doesn't want to miss a second of it!

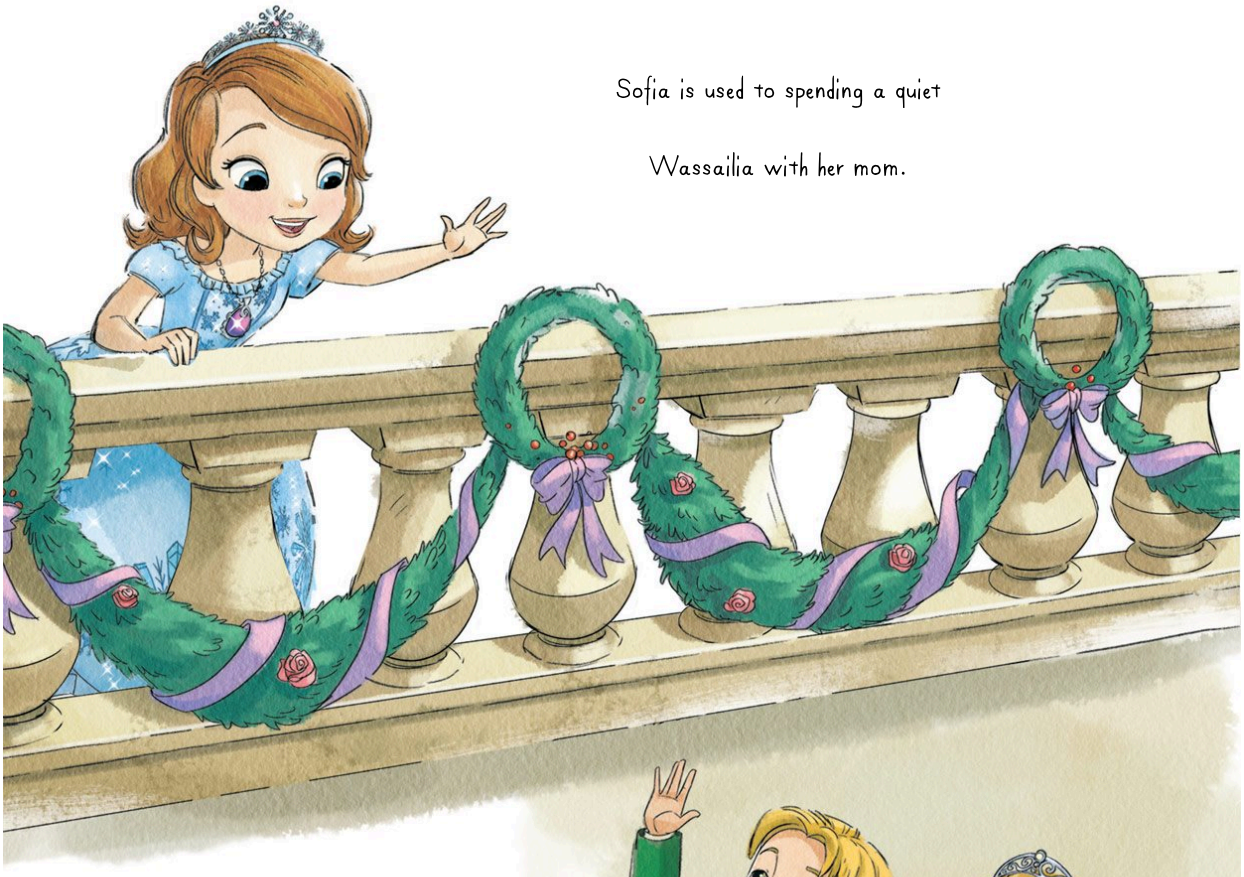
Sofia is used to spending a quiet

Wassailia with her mom.



But James and Amber say

that here in the castle,

Wassailia is really different.

"Happy Wassailia, Amber!"

says Sofia.

"It will be if I get that unicorn I've been asking for,"

Amber says.

Just then, Sofia's mom, Miranda comes in.

"Where's Dad?" James asks.

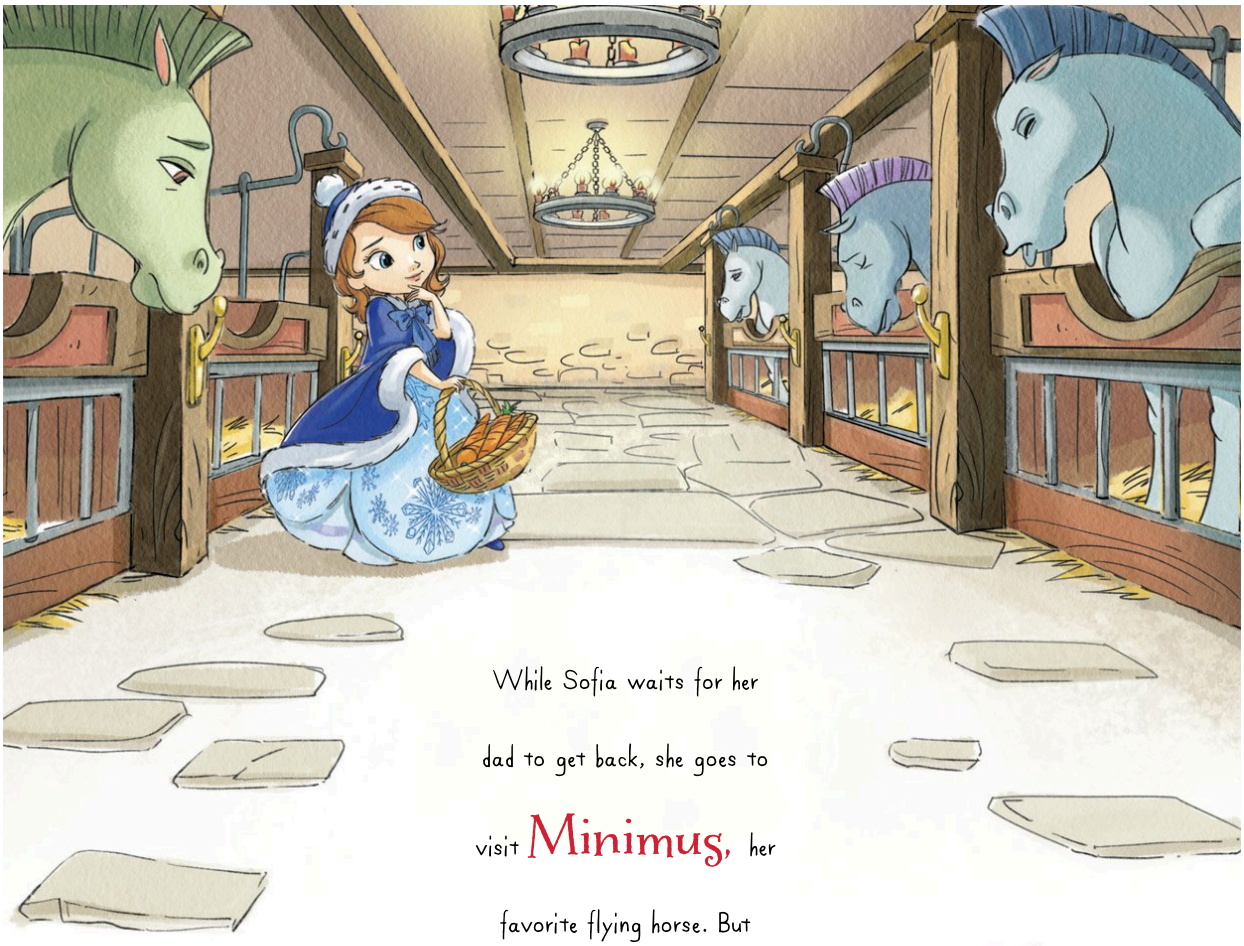
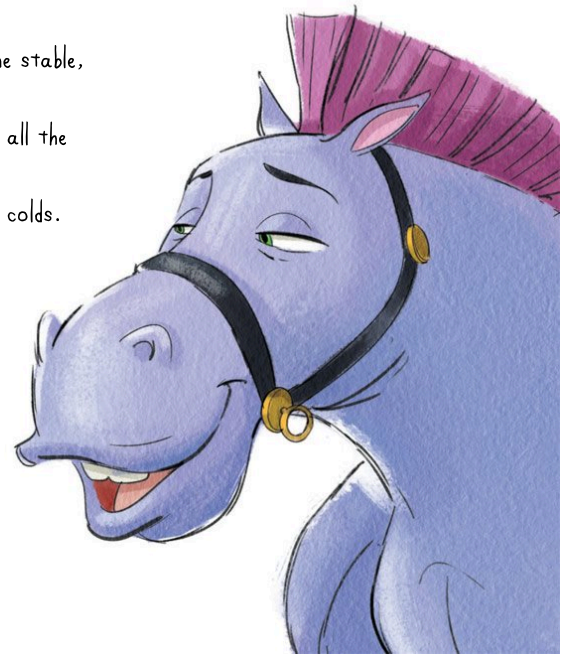
Miranda says he's out on urgent royal business with Baileywick.

"He'll be back in time for the party, though," she says.



While Sofia waits for her dad to get back, she goes to visit Minimus, her favorite flying horse. But when she gets to the stable, she finds out that all the other horses have colds.



Minimus is okay, though.

He tells Sofia that even though the other horses are sick,

he's glad to spend the holiday with her.

It has started snowing again

by the time Sofia gets back to the castle, and her dad's still not home!

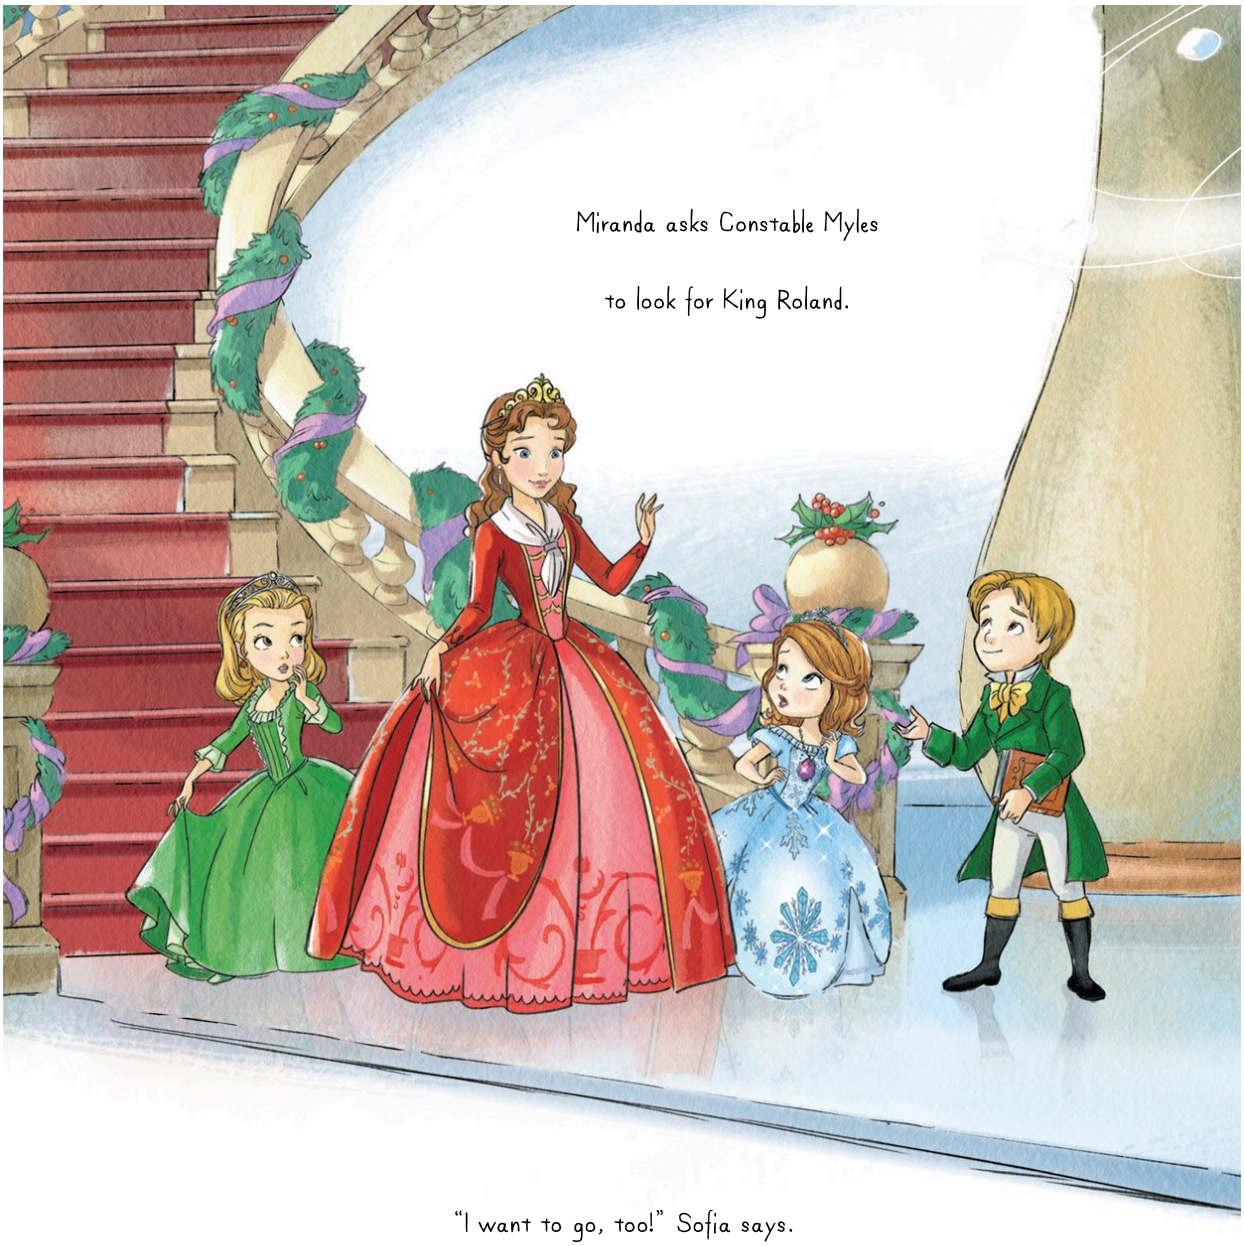
"Shouldn't he be back by now?" asks Sofia.

Amber nods. "It's almost time for the party."



Miranda asks Constable Myles

to look for King Roland.

"I want to go, too!" Sofia says.

"If she's going, I'm going," says James.

"Why don't we all go?" Miranda says.

"We can take the flying coach."

Minimus is the only flying horse healthy enough to pull the coach.

"Minimus can do it!" Sofia says.

"I'm not so sure about that," Minimus mutters.

As the coach takes off,

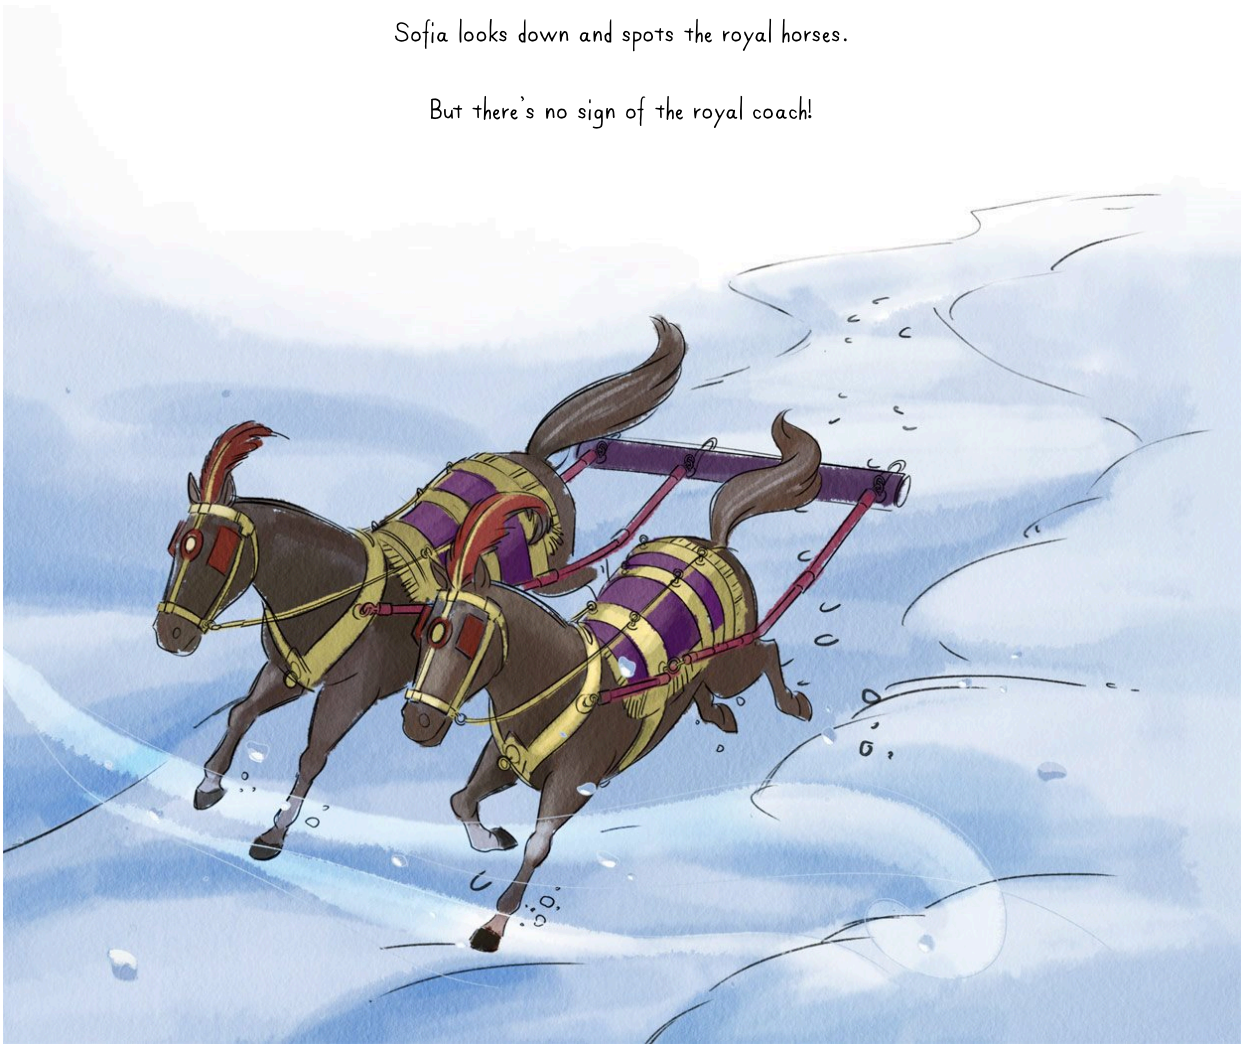
Clover, Robin, and Mia hop onto the back.

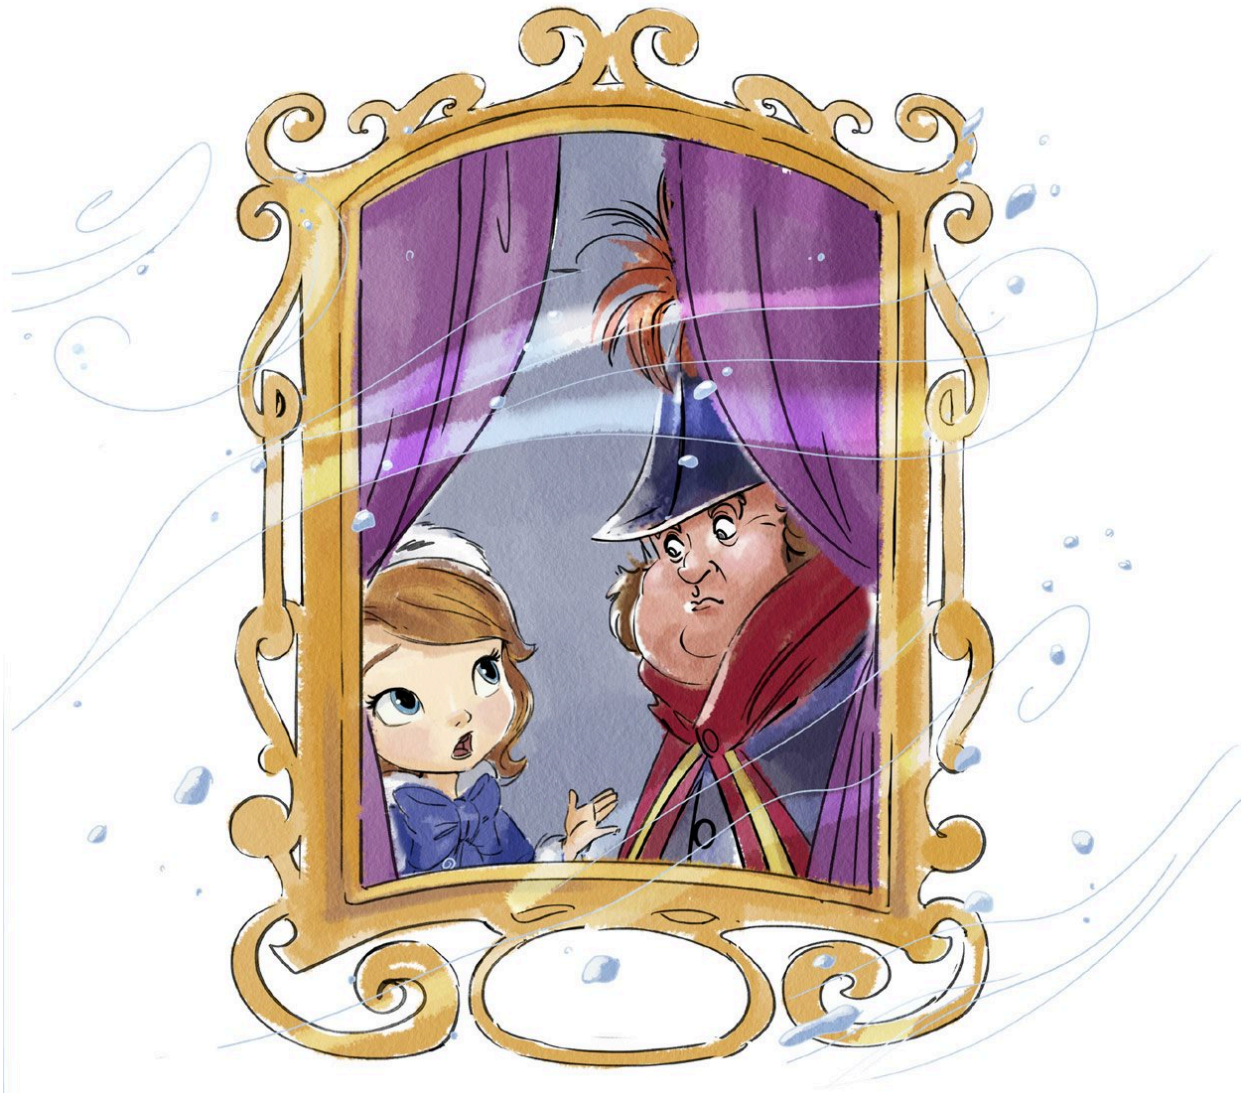
They want to help find the king, too!

Soon the coach is flying over the road.

Sofia looks down and spots the royal horses.

But there's no sign of the royal coach!





"The storm is getting worse," Constable Myles says.

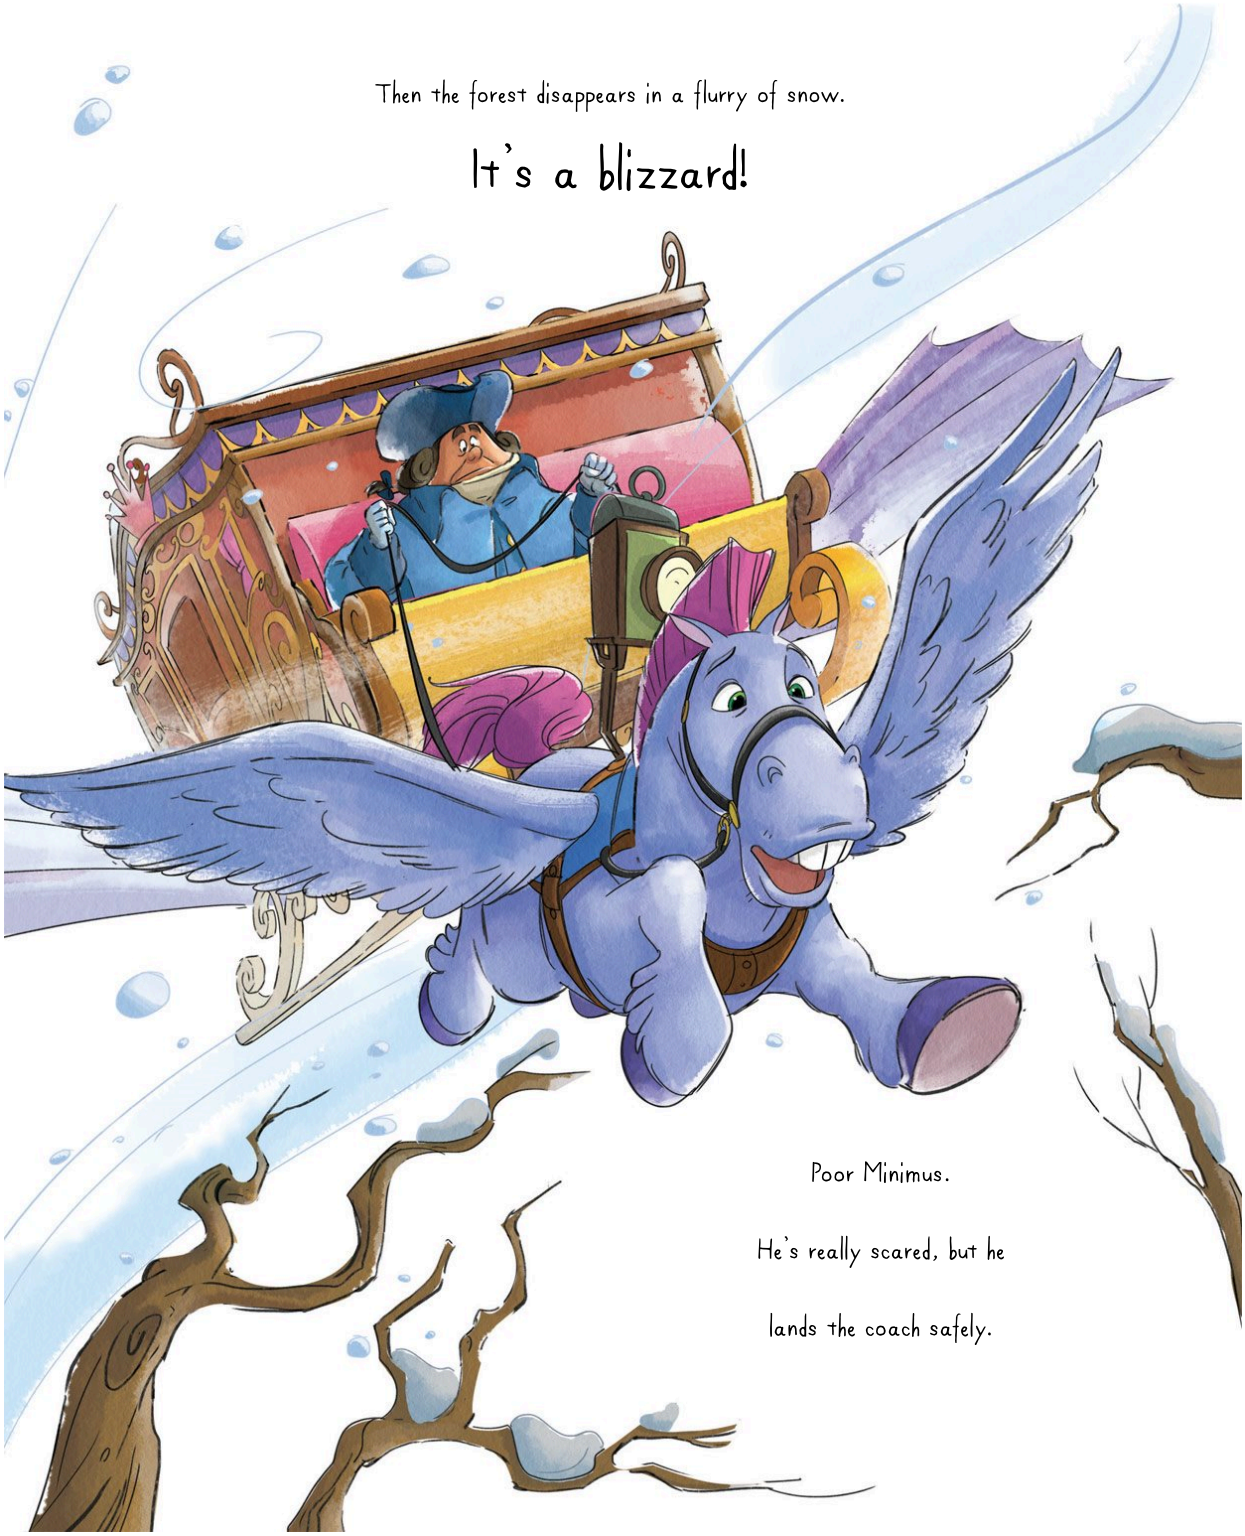
"We need to turn around."

Sofia shakes her head.

"We can't go back until we find Dad!"

Then the forest disappears in a flurry of snow.

It's a blizzard!



Poor Minimus.

He's really scared, but he lands the coach safely.

Constable Myles wants everyone to wait inside the coach until the storm passes.

But Miranda knows Sofia is worried about

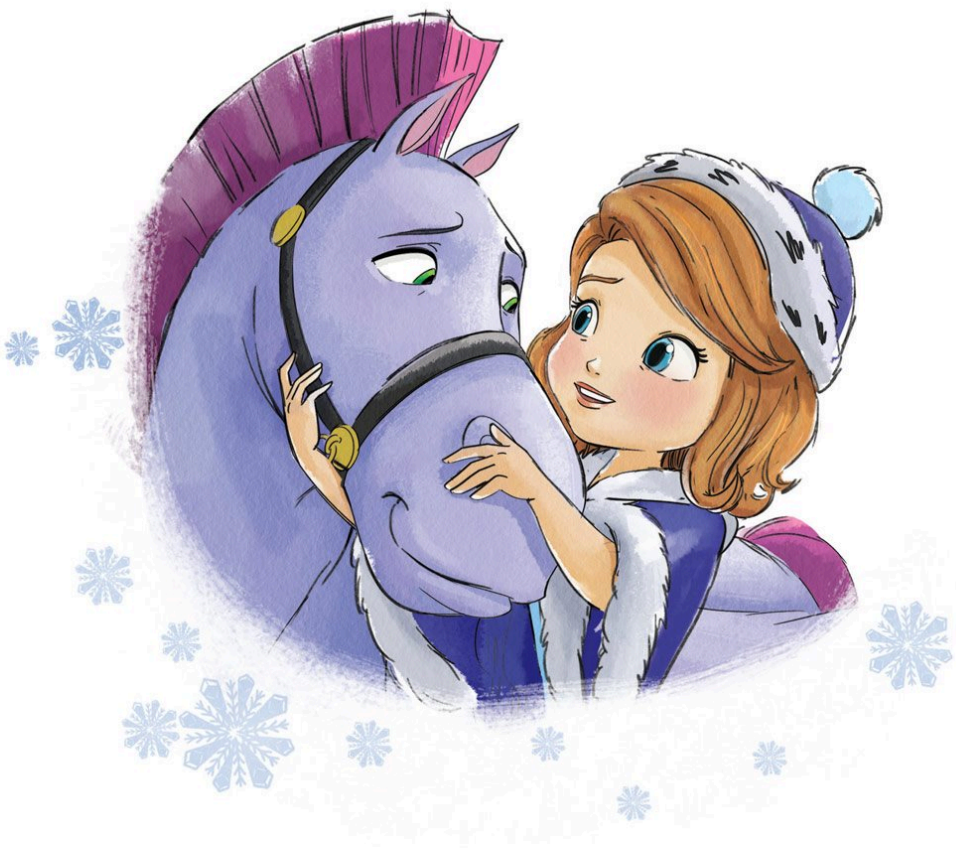
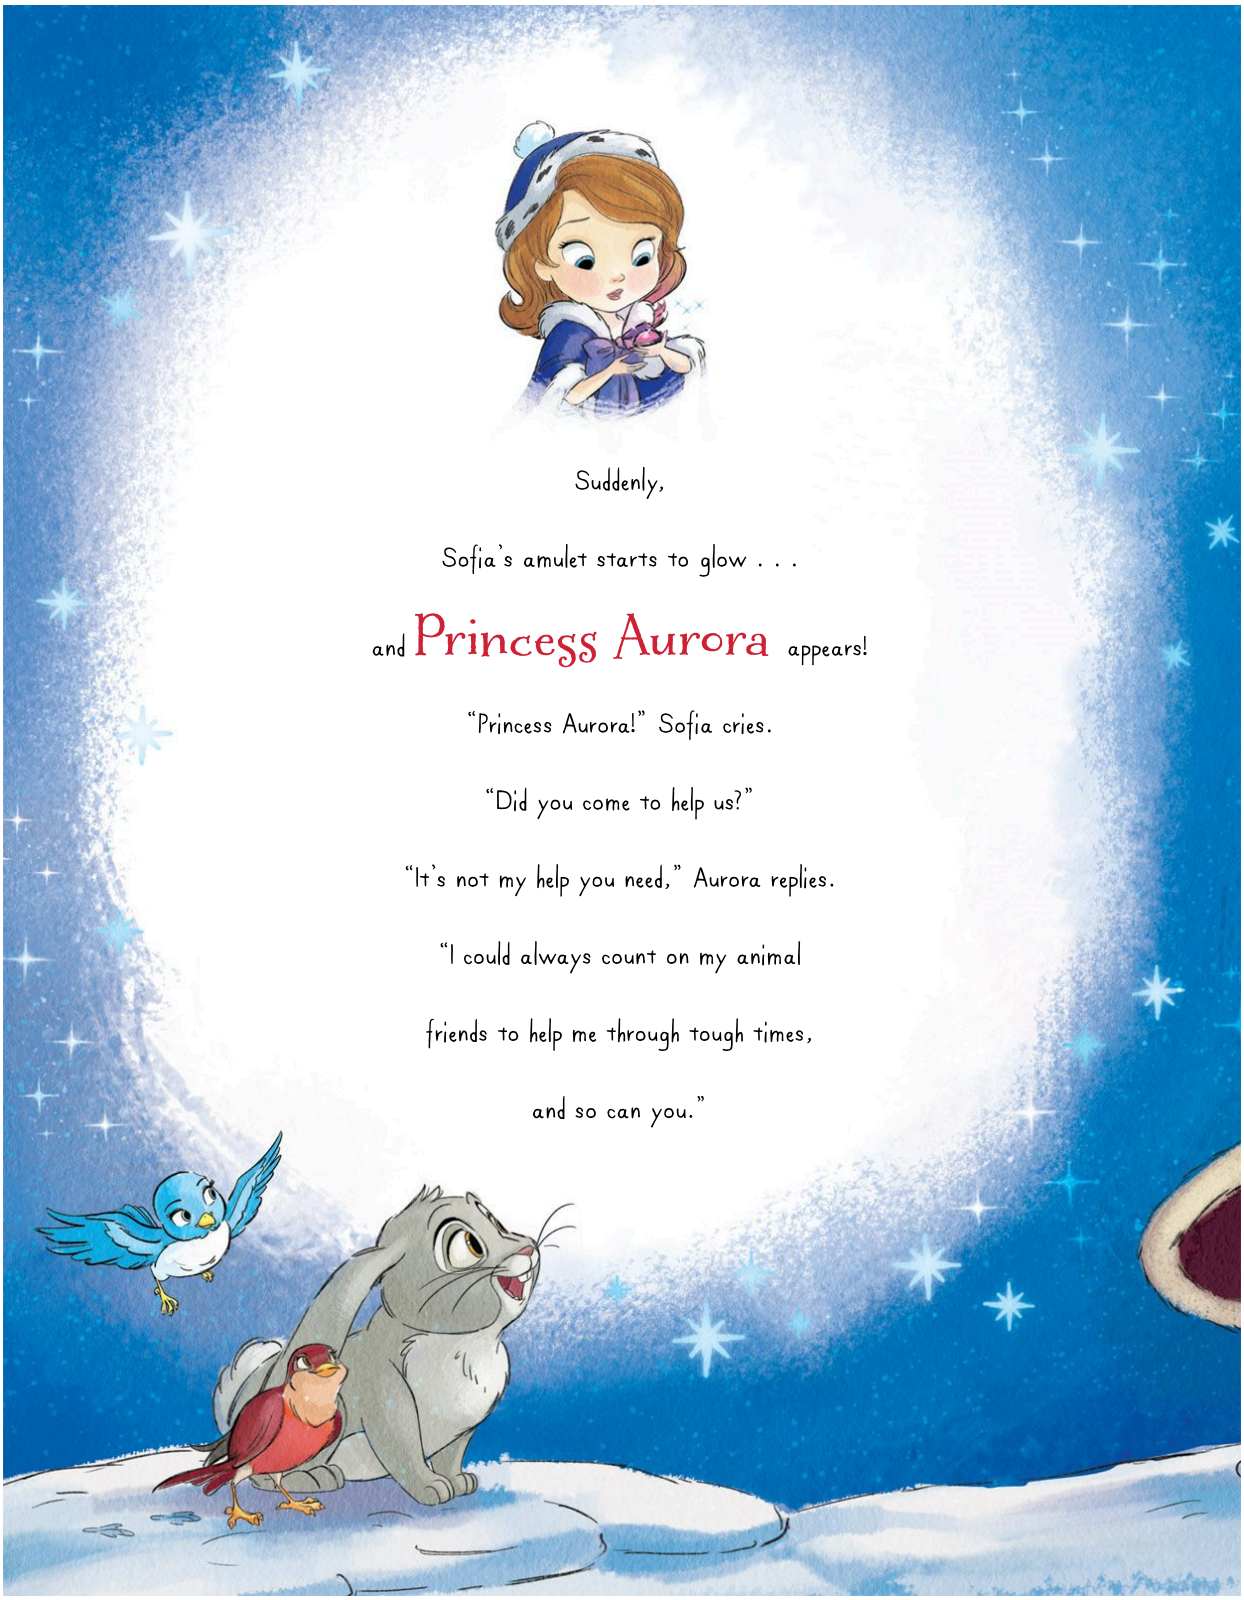
Minimus, so she lets her check on him.



"What are we going to do, Minimus?" Sofia says.

"We have to find Dad!"



Suddenly,

Sofia's amulet starts to glow . . .

and Princess Aurora appears!

"Princess Aurora!" Sofia cries.

"Did you come to help us?"

"It's not my help you need," Aurora replies.

"I could always count on my animal friends to help me through tough times,

and so can you."

When Sofia sees Clover,

Robin, and Mia, she thinks that Aurora might be right:

maybe her animal friends can help! Sofia asks them to ask the creatures of the woods to help search for the king.

Pretty soon, the message spreads

through the whole forest:

Then they see him!

Before long, Robin and Mia

return with good news.

"We found him!"

Amber

looks puzzled.

"What are your birds

doing here?"

Uh-oh. Sofia can understand what they're saying,

but everyone else just hears chirping.

Sofia has to think fast.

"Um . . . I think they're trying to tell us something!"

Luckily, she convinces everyone to follow the animals.

Minimus pulls the coach through the snow until it comes to a cozy little wood cabin.

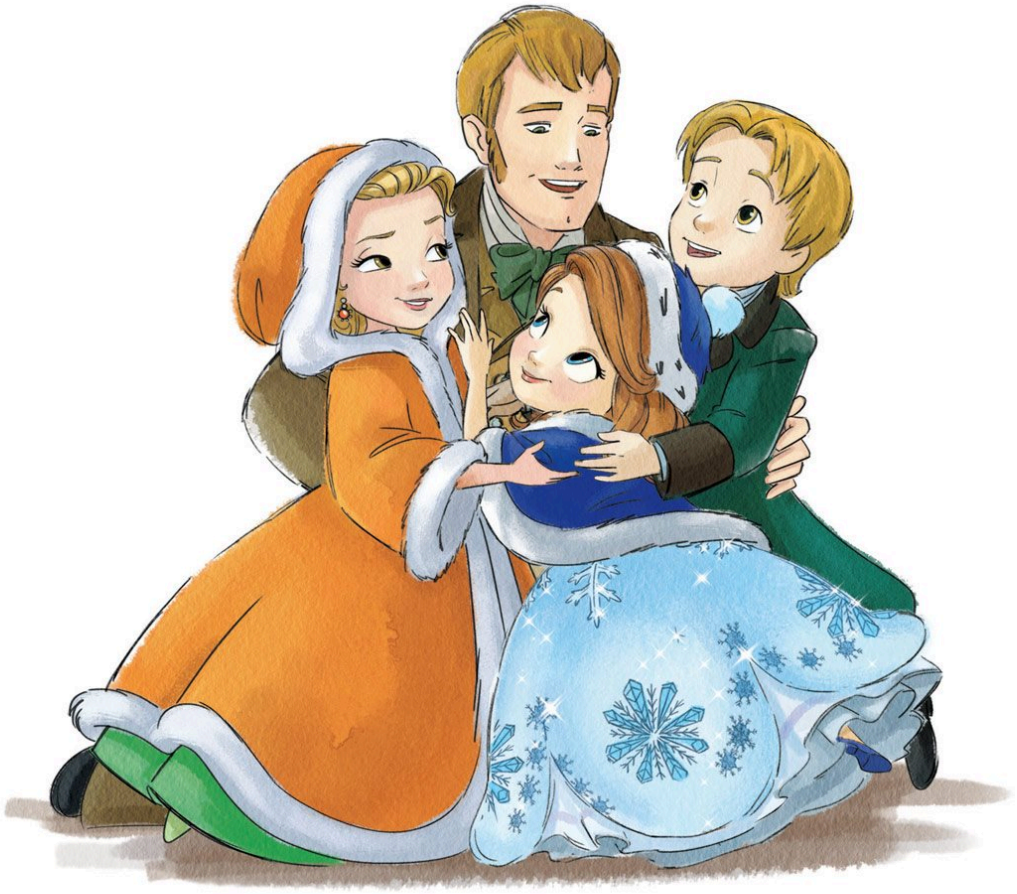
King Roland!



"How did you find me?" he asks.

"It's a Wassailia miracle!" Sofia says, giving him a big hug. "But how did you end up here?"

Roland admits to everyone that his urgent royal business was actually going to town to find gifts for them.

But the road back to the castle was icy, and the royal coach got stuck in the snow!

"Luckily," says Baileywick,

"this kind woodsman found us and invited us to take shelter in his cabin with his family."

"This is what the holidays are all about," Roland says.

"Spending time with your loved ones."

Sofia looks at all the gifts her dad has for them, and she knows what to do. "Happy Wassailia!" she says, giving her presents to the woodsman's children.

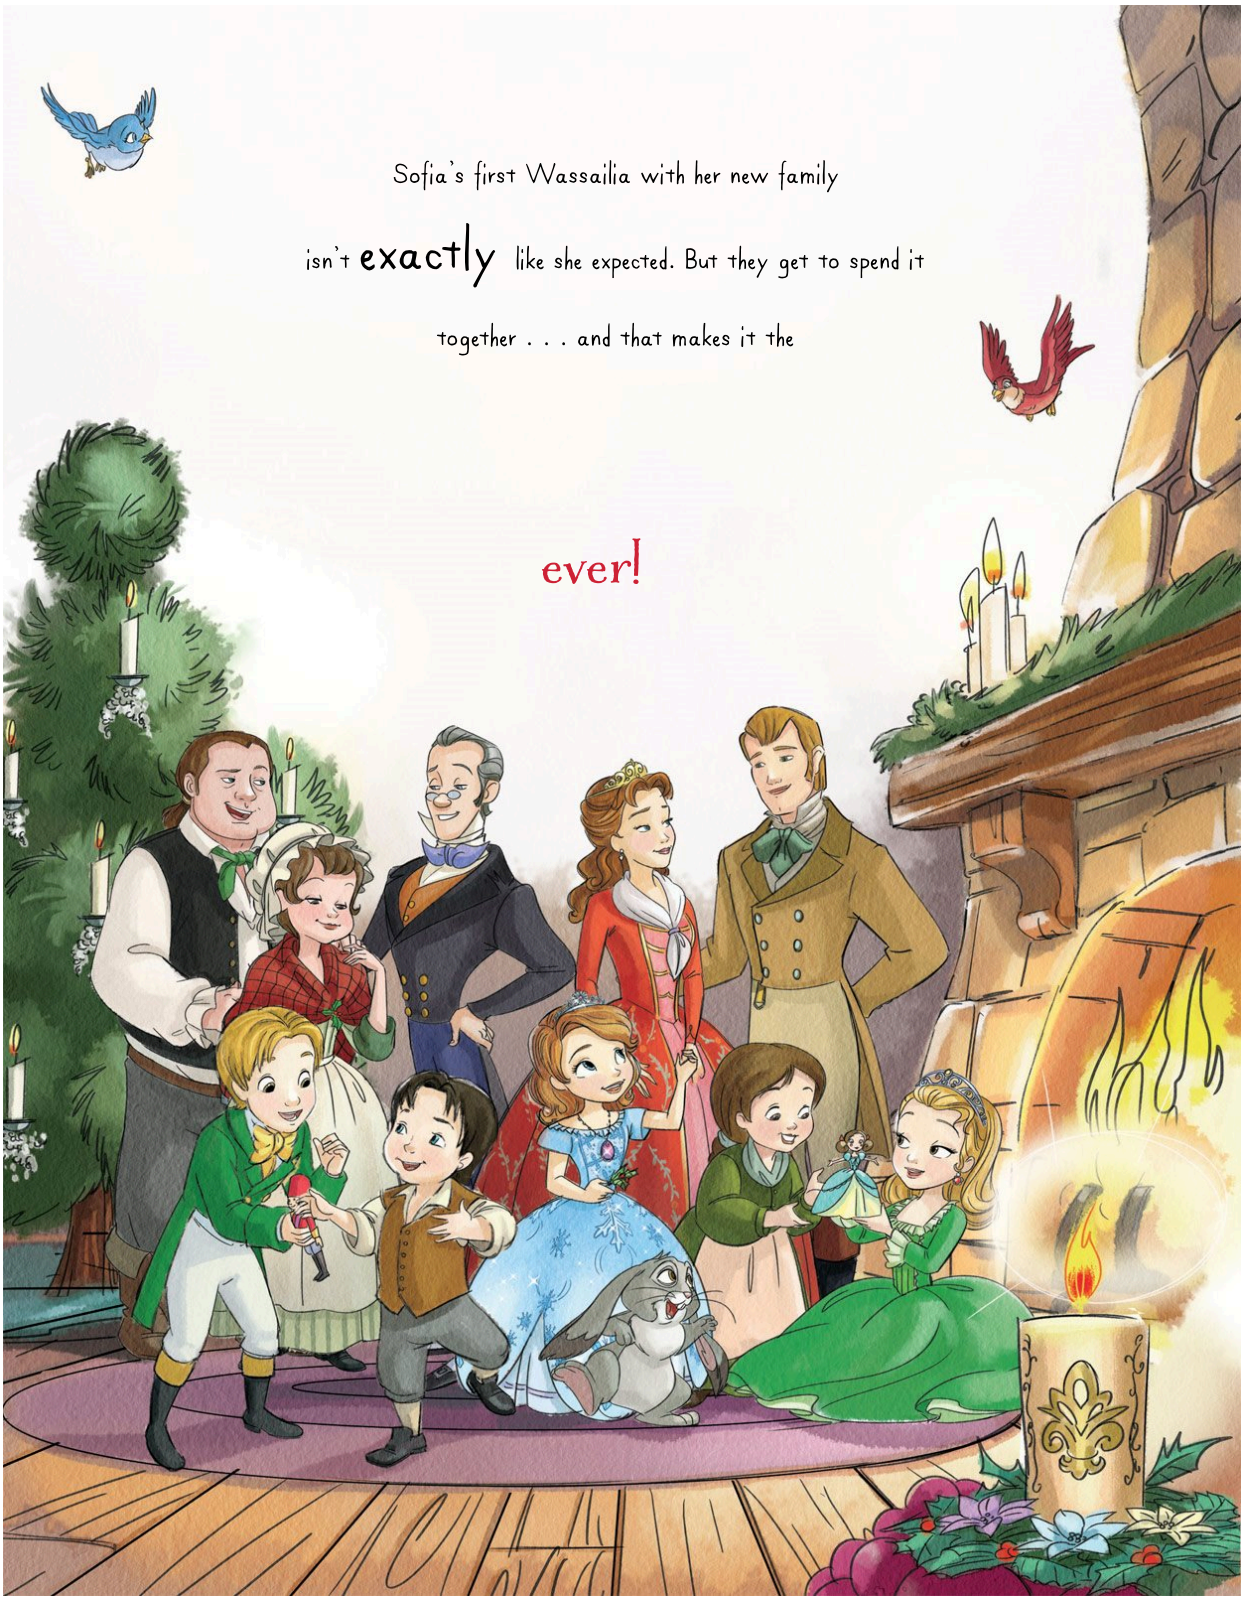
Then she helps her parents light the Wassailia candle.



Sofia's first Wassailia with her new family isn't exactly like she expected. But they get to spend it together . . . and that makes it the ever!
